Scientific Meeting & Dinner

Complaints against doctors are on the rise! Why are patients complaining and what can you do.

Guest Speakers: Ms Karen Stott, Lawyer, ADR & Mediation Services & Ms Rachel King, Translational Neuroscience

Wednesday 14th March 2018, 6.15pm Meeting, 7.30pm Dinner

Ms Karen Stott is a lawyer with 20 years of litigation experience, and a nationally accredited mediator. She has practised in a wide range of areas, particularly health law. Karen's experience in this area includes representation of patients as well as individual health care providers, hospitals and insurers. She has also served as a Board member on the NSW Health Practitioners Council and also on one of the inaugural AHPRA Boards from 2009. She has first hand experience "on both sides" in litigation, Coronial inquiries, the complaints process, and in dispute resolution. To that end, Karen became a full-time Mediator in 2016. www.ADRmediation.com.au

Ms Rachel King began studying the multi-disciplinary field of neuroscience from a need to know basis, with a focus on how the brain learns and adapts, known as neuroplasticity. Her experience with a sizable benign brain tumour, provided a steep learning curve about neuroimaging, radiology reports, brain structure and function, biomedical terminology, audiology and more. Rachel's initial interest in understanding how neuroscience could support her, developed into a passion that lead her to undertake post-graduate studies examining brain structure and function. Rachel is currently completing a second Masters degree in Brain and Mind Sciences at Sydney University Medical School. Now Rachel works to bridge the gap between empirical neuroscientific research and its translation and application by the legal, medical and business sectors. Her work ranges from educating about the neurobiology of stress and its impacts on mental capital and wellbeing to translating case specific complex neuroscientific evidence to advising organisations such as Cochlear Ltd and guest lecturing at Macquarie University. Rachel is also a nationally accredited mediator, conflict and performance coach and an individual EAP provider. www.rachelking.com.au
