

Dr Jack Marjot

Critical Care Doctor & Medical Advisor

Jack an Emergency Medicine doctor, he trained at Prince of Wales and is about to move to Liverpool Hospital.

He was awarded the Buchanan Prize by the Australasian College for Emergency Medicine for achieving the highest score in my cohort in the emergency medicine fellowship exam in Australia and New Zealand.

He graduated top of my class at University College London for both my BSc and MBBS. In post-graduate specialty exams he was the highest scoring candidate in Australia and New Zealand for both the Primary and Fellowship Exam. He has cultivated a strong research background spanning cardiac biomarkers, medico-legal risk, and extreme environment medicine.

During 2020 I took a step out of front-line clinical practice to work as a medico-legal advisor specialising in COVID-19 at Australia's largest medical defence organisation. My role was to assimilate the phenomenal amount of evolving information about COVID-19, and translate it into policy, education and advocacy initiatives at a national level.

I am skilled in communicating nuanced clinical concepts to the medico-legal and insurance industries, especially in the face of new and evolving threats like COVID-19.
